The Cloud vs. IT Professionals
JJ Rosen - Founder, Atiba Holdings, LLC

The rise of cloud computing has impacted the world of technology professionals in a number of ways, some more subtle than others. Do you design a system differently if there is no limit to file size? Do companies need their own data center or use the cloud? Does the cloud reduce or create career opportunities for technology professionals? Do IT people need to develop new skills because of cloud computing?

Our November speaker will discuss the rise of cloud computing and its affect on the IT world.

Our speaker is JJ Rosen who is the Founder of Atiba Holdings, LLC, and continues to serve as the Chairman of the company today. JJ founded Atiba in 1992 as a computer consulting firm with the goal of providing clients with a single source for all of their computer system needs. Atiba has since grown to be one of the leading software development, web design, network support, and IT consulting firms in Nashville working for over 2000 clients throughout the world.

JJ is a highly skilled programmer, and as such, has recruited the best software developers, mobile app developers, web developers, network architects and website designers in the Southeast to serve on the Atiba and Cabedge teams.

JJ Rosen is from Nashville, TN. He attended University School of Nashville and graduated Summa Cum Laude from Vanderbilt University with a degree in Human and Organizational Development. He is Microsoft certified. In his spare time, JJ likes to play drums and squash. He and his family live in the West Nashville area.

This session should give us all a better understanding of the effect of cloud computing and how to prepare for the future.
