"Cloud Computing and Other Stuff"

Dr. Gerald Marquis - Professor, Tennessee State University

On February 13th at the next AITP meeting we are excited to have Gerald Marquis who will discuss the genesis of Cloud computing. In real life if the clouds descend and meet the ground we call it fog. Gerald will also discuss what Fog computing is which is a recent concept designed to deal with some of the drawbacks of the cloud computing infrastructure. Yes you read it here first, cloud computing isn't a one size fits all solution. Come and listen to how cloud computing is responding to new challenges and how it may evolve in the coming years.

Dr. Marquis is a Professor at Tennessee State University in the Business Information Systems department in the College of Business. He received his Ph.D. from Texas Tech University in Information Systems. He has been teaching computer information systems courses for over thirty years. Prior to his teaching, Dr. Marquis worked for over fifteen years in manufacturing, banking, and system software development. His research interests include systems analysis, systems design, and database systems. Dr. Marquis has supported the efforts of the Office of Business and Economic Research through the design and implementation of databases to manage their accumulated data.

Gerald and his wife have lived in Nashville for twenty years. He has been an AITP member since 1987 and is an active member of the Nashville AITP Board serving as the College Chapter Liaison. Gerald enjoys woodworking and is noted for his unique oven tools.
